The first prisoner is steward, the second cook, and the hird is a bumboatman attached to the ship. I few days ago I get information about ship's stores being made away with in consequence of which I looked out for the third risoner, who same on board this morning, and oliarged him with having purchased from the ship's cook and steward certain stores. He said "I bought some stores from them. I asked them. if they were their's, and they said they were passengers's stores. I asked them what the har contained and they asid butter, biscuiss, fight, and west, also a ham." I then took the second prisoner to the Police Station and re ported it to the Inspector. I cannot swear to the articles produced being the ship's stores, but I have stores of the same kind. I went with the Inspector to the third prisoner's house, and he produced the ham a tin of butter, one tin of herrings, four tius of cod fish, one of fresh aglmon, three lebster, and one of Strasburg meat, the same as now in Court. The cook and the steward had no stores of their own on the ship to my knowlodge. I arrived here from Newcastle, N.S.W. on the 25th October, 1877. I have been in the harbour since then. It appears that these two men formed part of a boat's crow to bring an officer ashore. and while the bout was waiting at the hatobs for the return of the officer they thought it a goodopportunity for a rau. They started but forgot to return, and in short time a warrant was issued. by request of the captain of the Alert, to arrest execute the warrant, and found the whereabouts of the men, who on seeing him, speedily decamped. The constable observed the way they were running and took a short cut so as to intercept them, and came upon them unexpectedly in rounding a corner. One of the sailors was armed with a long oudgel, and, on perceiving that he had mn into the vory arms of the constable with an eath, made a desperate blow at him. To guard his head Hezel raised his left arm and received the full force of the blow topon it, which at once fell helpless by his side. He then closed with his integonist, grasping him by the throat. A second blow on the head, however brought him to the ground, but he still retained his hold on the other's thront, who then called to his mate for a kuife " to finish the officer with." The whife was produced and opened, when, fortunately for Mr. Hazel, some Japanese policemen arrived; and the ruffian broke away, and fled. MR. STANLEY'S DISCOVERIDS. Who shall say, asks The Times, that the world is not young, or that this is not an age of discovery? Mr. H. M. Stanley, who has just been received with due honour at the Cape has laid open to be snother new world, with infinite possibilities, promises, and splendours. The grand result is numietakeable, and deserves all the honour that can be rendered to it. We now know that on the West of Africa there is a waterway more vast, it would seem, than even that of the Nile, and occupying countries for more fertile and productive than even Egypt. It is the human savagery, and that alone, which disfigures these fine regions. Mr. Stanley, though an American, is good enough to hold out ic this country a boundless prospect of conquest and colonisation in Central Africa. There is a broad river, he tells us, with one of the finest and most capacious mouths in the world, where little that the ships and commercial steamers might float at all seasons, with a depth of 1,300 feet, and a volume of two millions and a half cubic feet of water the wonderful spectacle, "that you will not take advantage of all this?" It is to be hered we kind is destined to be the home of some wonder- tributed among all Contributors of Business in ful commercial and, perhaps, social development, proportion to the premium paid by them.

For practical purposes the human race has still the world before it; and these new regions, not

But we apprehend that for a long while Mr. Stanley and Commander Cameron will hold THE Undersigned, Agents for the above the chief possession, and that an honorary one, in these new realms.
